À Samira Said is busy preparing for her next album, but the label remains undecided after she decline to renew contract with Alam el Phan.

The Moroccan leading singer's latest album, Ayyam Hayati (Days of My Life), faced many obstacles. This, and fees below what she expects are behind her split with the record company.

There was one video from the album for Hobb May'oud Menno (Hopeless Love), A new single is underway, it seems, as Said is meeting with lyricist Ayman Bahgat Qamar and arranger Tareq Madkour. It will be a self-funded project, including the video. This may extend to the entire album if she finds a good distributor.

A duet to bring Said and Cherine together is yet to be hatched, Cherine has reportedly turned down a duet with cheb Faudel.

Said is making no secret of her Grammy dreams. But said a wannabe Grammy winner must be present in the Western music scene.

The album may include a song written by late composer Kamal el Tawil and legendary poet-lyricist Abdel Rahman el Abnoudi.
